Nndem loved Calgary so much he decided not to leave with his company when they relocated to the United States. Instead he started his own business as a SAP BI consultant.

Transport hearing draws huge response

JOEL MESSNER
for Metro Calgary

PLANNING Tomorrow's public hearing in council chambers will be the biggest that one alderman has seen since the start of his first term on council.

With 585 public submissions surrounding the Plan It Calgary documents on future municipal and transportation planning, citizens have definitely shown their interest in shaping the city's future growth.

"(This amount of submissions) is ridiculously high if you were to compare it to the normal public hearings that we have with nothing controversial," said Ward 3 Ald. Jim Stevenson.

"There's nothing more controversial or major as far as an impact on the future of the city than this. So I don't know what to judge this by or measure this by because this is a one-of-a-kind thing for me here since my time in city hall."

Stevenson's Calgarians have gotten involved.

"We have a tendency to think that as a council or our administration that we have all the great ideas," said Stevenson. "People have to realize that the general public can come up with ideas or consequences that we haven't thought of."

Close call exposes danger

Police remind public to be safe when rafting on Bow River

AMY GREGSON
for Metro Calgary

Just a day after the Calgary Police and Calgary Animal & Bylaw Services launched their summer awareness rafting education and enforcement campaign, a close call happened near Calgary's "drowning machine."

On Saturday at 9:10 p.m., the Calgary Fire Department's Aquatic Rescue Team was called out to rescue four women, all in their 20s, who were holding onto the safety boom near the weir.

"It just seemed like the stars were all in line for these four ladies," said Jeff Budai, public information officer with the Calgary Fire Department.

Budai said that all four women, who are from Edmonton, were wearing life-jackets and that a number of people around the area called 9-1-1 allowing the aquatics team to respond quickly.

Budai hopes the rescue acts as a reminder for people that the weir is a dangerous place and that it's important to be prepared when heading out rafting.

"It's been labelled the drowning machine for a reason. We try to make (sure) people are well aware of that and that they're staying away from that area, especially when rafting," said Budai.

Budai said it's important for people to have a plan when heading out rafting and make sure to tell someone where you plan to start and stop. "If something should happen and someone goes missing the aquatics team would have a place to start," said Budai.

He also said to always wear a lifejacket, don't tie rafts together and respect others' property.

City to fix up Devonian Gardens

FACELIFT It appears as though Calgary's Devonian Gardens will be getting a facelift but the extent of its improvements are still up in the air.

It is still up to council if the city wants to give the gardens a cheaper quick fix or a more comprehensive sustainable renovation.

"The owners are redoing the entire area (that the gardens are in), so we have an opportunity here to update the Devonian Gardens, which are as far as I am concerned the jewel of indoor gardens in the city," said Brian Pincott, Ward 11 alderman.

According to the redevelopment proposal the gardens can either be restored to accommodate the changes to the mall and the immediate life cycle issues, or do a more comprehensive restoration that would include new water features, Koi ponds, improved staff offices and a children's play area.

RUN It only took 12-year-old Tyler Leonzio 23 minutes and 17 seconds to run five kilometres yesterday in the Safeway Father's Day Walk and Run for prostate cancer in support of his grandfather.

Tyler's grandfather was diagnosed with prostate cancer last year, has gone through radiation and is now being monitored by doctors. "I'm just trying to help to find a cure," said Tyler, who ran with his father Dean Leonzio.

This is the second Father's Day Walk and Run in Calgary in support of prostate cancer, which was held in eight other cities in Canada.

"It's fantastic that we have a great crowd of people out here today to create awareness about the disease, talk to men about getting detected and raise funds through research," said Greg Sarney, vice-president of development for prostate cancer Canada.

Sarney said one in six men will be affected in their lifetime and 250,500 men in Canada will be diagnosed this year.

Organizers hoped to raise more than $1 million across Canada, said Sarney.

Calgarians raised approximately $150,000, almost double the 2008 amount.

Same-sex marriage: Where are we now?

A look at how legal status impacts personal lives

MAUREEN LITTLEJOHN
for Metro Canada

It has been four years since same-sex marriage was made legal across Canada and six years since it was legalized in Ontario and British Columbia. The battle to pass Bill C-38 was a triumph for Canada's gay population, but how many people are actually tying the knot? And for those who have, how has legal status impacted their lives?

Chris Higgins, 54, married her partner Chris Phibbs, 50, at a Gay Pride Eve party they threw at their Toronto home in 2005.

"I needed to confirm our relationship officially with my friends and family," she says. The couple's family includes a son they adopted in 1995.

"All steps taken in the interest of equality are important. Gay marriage cemented the right to be equal in the eyes of the law in all aspects of our lives," she notes.

For some people the right to marry is a partial victory. Clayton Chrusch,

"I needed to confirm our relationship [officially with my friends and family ... All steps taken in the interest of equality are important. Gay marriage cemented the right to be equal in the eyes of the law in all aspects of our lives.]"

Chris Higgins,
on her marriage

33, a computer programmer, wed Michael Reid, 32, a university astronomy instructor, at a B&B in Dundas, Ont., in October 2003. Shortly after the wedding, they moved to Hawaii where Reid had been offered a job.

Their marriage wasn't recognized in the United States, though, and Chrusch's status was that of a tourist with no health care or job prospects. In 18 months they were back in Canada.

"Same-sex marriage in Canada is no guarantee that gay people can live their lives without unjust restrictions," says Chrusch.

The 2006 census counted 7,500 same-sex married couples.

However, there was concern about the wording on the form that requested same-sex couples mark an "other" box rather than the "married" box.

Egale Canada, an advocate group for gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered rights, stated many of its members had chosen not to complete the census in protest.

Canadians for Equal Marriage, a now defunct advocacy organization, reported there had been 12,438 same-sex marriage licences issued in Canada between 2003-2005, based on its own research of municipal records.

Toronto's city hall confirmed 5,603 same-sex marriage licences have been issued since 2003. Some of those went to non-residents.

Matthew Brozyna, with Hudson Nuptials, a same-sex wedding planning company in Toronto, says, "Most of our clientele is American or from overseas. They want to get married where it is legal, even though it doesn't often transfer to where they live."

Grit calls for funding probe

POLITICS The auditor general is being asked to probe why Conservative-held ridings got the lion's share of money from a federal program to improve building access for the disabled, including $15 million to Finance Minister Jim Flaherty's constituency.

Liberal MP Mike Savage accused the Conservatives of running a "political slush fund." Of the $38 million distributed under the Enabling Access Fund, $35.9 million went to Conservative ridings, while opposition-held ridings got a total of just $2 million, said Savage.

People with disabilities have been "shut out" because of partisan interests, Savage told the Commons. "There are too many troubling questions surrounding this program," said Savage.

"All these unanswered questions suggest the fund was created to help Conservatives and also suggest serious political interference."

Protesters urged to continue

Iranian opposition leader Mirhossein Mousavi urged supporters yesterday to continue protests over a disputed presidential election, in a direct challenge to the leadership of the Islamic Republic.

Mousavi also issued an oblique appeal to the security forces to show restraint in handling demonstrations — a move likely to be viewed with deep suspicion by a conservative leadership that has vowed to use force wherever necessary to quell opposition.

Helicopters buzzed through the evening sky over Tehran and gunfire was heard in northern Tehran, a bastion of support for the reformist former prime minister.

and fraud (in the election) is your right," Mousavi said in a statement on his website.

"In your protests, continue to show restraint. I am expecting armed forces to avoid irreversible damage."

Iran state television said 10 people were killed and more than 100 others injured in protests in Tehran on Saturday held in defiance of a warning from Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei.

A separate report put the number of deaths at 13.

Mousavi said on Saturday he was not questioning the fundamentals of the Islamic Republic but sought to renew it and purge it of what he called deceit and lies.

The dispute over the June 12 election that returned to power hardline anti-Western President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad has sparked the most violent unrest since the Islamic Revolution.

73 dead in Iraq blast

ATTACK The death toll from Iraq's deadliest bombing in more than a year rose to 73, police said yesterday, a day after a suicide bomber detonated a truck packed with explosives outside a mosque in the north of the country.

More than half of the victims were pulled from the rubble and dust of around 70 clay brick homes that were flattened in the explosion near the northern city of Kirkuk, said Brig.-Gen. Najeh Mohammed, the local head of civil defence.

Saturday's blast was the deadliest attack in Iraq since female suicide bombers killed 99 people in a Baghdad pet market in February last year.

Thirty-five children and 15 women were among the dead in the Kirkuk attack. More than 250 people were wounded.

Take pride in your deck

HineSight

Anne Hines

metronews.ca/hinesight

It's Pride week in my city and my partner, Liz, and I have hit on the perfect way to celebrate. We're going to spend the whole of parade day staining our back deck. I remember my first Pride. I was alone, barely "out" and entirely terrified. I'd heard the thing to do was to appear naked, so I wore shorts that almost didn't cover my knees. For me, naked is a relative term.

My first 15 minutes on Toronto's Church Street I was blasted with a high-power water gun, bumped into by two men chained together at the nipples and hit on by a woman with a pink Mohawk wearing nothing but Daisy Duke shorts and a smile. I loved it all.

My favourite Pride moment occurred years later.

A gaggle of elderly lady tourists stopped my friends and me, asking in halting English, "What is happening here?" We said it was Gay Pride.

They consulted their translation book and announced, "We gay too!"

Later we passed them again, decked in sparkly boas, sporting temporary rainbow tattoos and slightly tipsy.

"I don't think they know what gay is," a friend said. I suspect they did.

Over the years, Pride has changed.

You now see things you'd never expect.

Like, straight people.

The ratio of straight to gay spectators has become so high they'll soon have to stock the street with gays just to keep up the image of the event.

Most gay people choose to spend the parade period engaging in other crucial social planning issues; staking out the best seats in the beer garden for when the event's over.

This year, my glorious transwoman daughter, Jade, is getting ready to attend Pride for the first time.

I have to admit, I never imagined myself saying to my child, "You're not going anywhere in just a leather mini skirt and black bra, missy. For God's sake, put on some sunscreen."

And, Liz and I?

Our way of honouring what Gay Pride has achieved is to behave in a way that would have been unthinkable in previous decades ... just like any other middle age, married couple. If gay men and women before us fought for anything, it was for being gay simply not to matter.

So, come parade day, my wife and I will raise a cold beer in gratitude to those who made our wonderful, normal life and love possible. Hopefully on a newly stained deck.

Put pedal to metal on transit alternatives

InTransit

Shawn Logan

metronews.ca/intransit

Going the wrong way could be the right way to solve Calgary's groan-inducing gridlock.

Of course I'm talking about lane reversals, where traffic planners identify rush-hour choke-points and give an extra lane over to the direction with the most flow at peak times to relieve the constant crunch. Currently the city has two fully automated lane reversals on Centre St. north going into and out of the downtown core as well as along 10 Ave. N.W. through Kensington.

Two more, one along Memorial Dr. and the other at the 5 Ave. connector at Bow Tr. SW, have been undergoing trials for years, with lane reversals marked by pylons and portable street signs.

Both are set to become fully automated (with the overhead electronic lane marking signs that are well known on Centre St. and 10 Ave.) later this year after engineers saw how effective they were at slashing drive times during the rush hour commutes.

Troy McLeod, the city's manager of traffic, says Calgarians should get used to the low-cost but highly efficient solution in dealing with commuting woes.

"It certainly allows us to use the existing infrastructure more effectively," he said.

"For a relatively minor cost you can achieve a high benefit so we will definitely continue to look at these projects."

On Memorial, for example, what was once a 10-minute average commute through the inner city bottleneck has been reduced by four minutes. In the grand scheme, that's not that much, but every minute is precious to harried commuters. And the timing for such innovations couldn't be more crucial. Today, city council will debate its Plan-It Calgary blueprint, outlining how the city will grow over the next 60 years.

One of the more controversial tenets of the scheme is a moratorium on expansion to Calgary's existing road network despite projections of another 1.3 million residents to the city.

You thought your commute was bad now, try adding a few hundred thousand more vehicles to roadways that will not be substantially expanded in the future. The hope is people will flock to alternate forms of transportation — transit, cycling, walking — to relieve the pressure on packed roads.

But Calgary's roads have never been busier.

Lane reversals and other ways to optimize traffic flow have long taken a back seat to new interchanges and road expansion. But with plans to limit the road network, it's time to put the pedal to the metal on alternatives.

Shawn Logan is a veteran municipal affairs reporter who covered Calgary city hall for three years after working at a number of publications in southern Alberta.

Northern nations stress no Cold War over Arctic

OIL Arctic nations are promising to avoid a new "Cold War" linked to climate change, but military activity is stirring in a polar region where a thaw may allow oil and gas exploration or new shipping routes.

The six nations around the Arctic Ocean are promising to co-operate on challenges such as overseeing new fishing grounds or shipping routes in an area that has been too remote, cold and dark to be of any recent interest. But global warming is spurring long-irrelevant disputes, such as a Russian-Danish standoff over who owns the seabed under the North Pole or how far Canada controls the Northwest Passage that the United States calls an international waterway.

"The Arctic area would be of interest in 50 or 100 years — not now," said Lars Kullerød, president of the University of the Arctic. "It's hype to talk of a Cold War."

Still, in February, Prime Minister Stephen Harper criticized Russia's "increasingly aggressive" actions after a bomber flew close to Canada. And Russia, which is reasserting itself, sent a nuclear submarine in 2008 across the Arctic under the ice to the Pacific.

Norway recently purchased 48 Lockheed Martin F-35 jets for "exploration" and the U.S. is believed to be investing in "quieter" submarines.

Environmental half-truths?

EarthTones

Sophia Dore & Andrew Laursen

metronews.ca/earthtones

We were recently visiting with a friend who said she really wanted to be a responsible environmentalist, but found it difficult to know what to believe. The problem for her, as for all of us, is that she is constantly bombarded with conflicting information or "twists" on information.

The problem we find is individuals and organizations will tell you the Truth as they see it. Everyone is sharing an opinion, too often disguised as fact. It's a particular problem in the online age where information is disseminated long before it is vetted.

We had thought to write an article on environmental myths this week. Many industry groups and environmental organizations dedicate web space to debunking the "myths" perpetuated by other groups.

What is striking is how often two rival camps will cite the same studies and authorities, but select those elements that support their respective world views.

For example, a major business organization debunks the myth that we face a crisis in global deforestation, citing a UN report that forest cover is increasing in the U.S. and Europe and that 73 per cent of tropical rainforests remained intact. An environmental organization cites the same report, but emphasizes the sections detailing the rate of rainforest loss and the change in forest habitat in areas of regrowth.

Rival camps will often cite the same studies to support their views, such as answering questions like Nuclear or Coal?

So, who's right? Who do we listen to? In answer to both questions, everyone and no one. It would be easier to have a single authority we could trust to distill the information and give us an answer to the questions "Nuclear or Coal? Cloth or Disposable? Organic or Conventional? Ginger or MaryAnn?" However, we have seen how well the single voice of truth has played out in some countries. So the onus is on all of us to trust no single source of information, but to read many sources representing different views. Most will convey some part of the truth, few will convey it all. But don't take our word for it, read someone else.

Chemical ban takes aim at rubber duckies

TOYS Six common man-made chemicals will be banned in soft vinyl toys and lead limits will be lowered under proposed regulations announced by Ottawa.

The regulations are to help ensure that products intended for children are safe," said Health Minister Leona Aglukkaq.

"This not only catches us up with the U.S. and Europe, it's somewhat better," said Rick Smith, executive director of Environmental Defence. Without new rules, he said Canada risked becoming a dumping ground for toxic toys.

"Not at all," said Smith. "It's the rebirth of the rubber duck." A phthalate-free ducky is already available.

The government also proposed lowering lead limits in a range of consumer products, including young children's playthings, teething, baby bottle nipples as well as mouthpieces worn in sports and used with musical instruments.

Nortel says it will sell advanced wireless unit

Telecom equipment maker Nortel Networks said on Friday that it will sell its advanced wireless technology business to Nokia Siemens Networks for $734 million and that it was making progress in talks to sell its other businesses.

Nortel, once the largest North American maker of telecommunications gear, collapsed into bankruptcy in January, blaming the economic crisis for derailing a turnaround effort that began in 2005.

Nokia Siemens, a joint venture of Nokia and Siemens, had made an unsolicited offer for parts of Nortel's carrier network group, but the price and scope of a deal had been unclear.

The telecom equipment industry is consolidating and leaving only a few global players — market leader Ericsson, Huawei, Nokia Siemens and Alcatel-Lucent.

The deal will allow Nokia Siemens to expand its presence in North America and make it a leading supplier of wireless infrastructure products in the region, it said in a separate statement announcing the deal.

The transaction includes Nortel's CDMA business and LTE assets. CDMA is the technology that lost the battle for global dominance but still has a strong position in some markets, including North America. Nortel has a roughly 30 per cent share of the global CDMA market.

LTE is a new high-speed wireless technology that is intended to replace current mobile networks. LTE networks are slated to be deployed in the coming years by large wireless carriers including Vodafone Group Plc. and Verizon Communications Inc.

Apple CEO had liver transplant: Report

Investors could react negatively to news

Apple Chief Executive Steve Jobs underwent a liver transplant operation about two months ago and is expected to return to work by the end of June, The Wall Street Journal reported Saturday.

Jobs, a pancreatic cancer survivor seen as the driving force behind development of the iPod, iPhone and other category-defining products from Apple's famed innovation machine, went on medical leave in January for an undisclosed condition.

A spokesman for Apple Inc would not confirm the Journal report but said, "Steve continues to look forward to returning to Apple at the end of June and there is nothing further to say."

While investors may react negatively to the news today, when stock markets re-open, analysts say Wall Street is broadly prepared for Jobs' shift to a role that sees him focusing on big picture ideas and products at Apple.

Chief Operating Officer Tim Cook has been managing the company on a day-to-day basis in Jobs' absence, and is expected to continue to do so if Jobs does not return to the role full-time, analysts say.

The Journal, citing an unnamed source, said the 54-year-old Jobs may return to work part-time at first, with Cook taking on "a more encompassing role."

"The situation seems a lot more complex than it originally appeared," said Collins Stewart analyst Ashok Kumar. "Investors tend to react negatively to uncertainty, especially when it concerns an individual who's had a larger-than-life impact."

Others said investors were aware of the risk surrounding Jobs and that it had been factored into Apple's share price.

The technology firm's stock fell after Jobs went on medical leave but is up around 60 per cent this year, thanks to continued strong sales and new products, including the latest iPhone 3GS, which debuted on Friday.

Erick Maronak, chief investment officer for the Victory Large Cap Growth Fund, which owns Apple shares, said investors are less concerned than in the past because other executives had stepped to the forefront in Jobs' absence.

10 tips from Alison Griffiths

Journalist, author, Metro columnist offers advice on loyalty credit cards, doing a daily audit, the 24-hour rule and fine dining at home

In this economic climate, many Canadians are feeling overwhelmed and out of control with their finances.

Award-winning journalist, best-selling author, financial expert and — most recently — Metro columnist Alison Griffiths has some advice for those impacted by the economy — “KISS” or “keep it simply savvy.”

This refers to her savvy spending approach which ensures Canadians are maximizing their discretionary and non-discretionary spending each month. Griffiths explains that when finances are kept simple and spending stays in control, consumers are less likely to run into financial trouble and will have a clearer understanding of where their money is going.

There are many methods consumers can use to become savvy spenders and make the most of their everyday household purchases — using a credit card attached to a loyalty program responsibly is just one highly effective tool. When credit cards are paid off in full every month, they allow consumers to track their expenditures, build their credit rating and benefit from rewards such as loyalty points.

Alison's top ten tips on how to be a savvy spender:

- 1. Stretch each dollar on everyday purchases. Loyalty program credit cards can be a highly effective tool in making money go further — which is more important now than ever before. For example, with AIR MILES' (airmiles.ca) credit cards, savvy spenders can earn rewards on items such as groceries (metro.ca) and gas (shell.ca) which add up over time.
- 2. Do a daily audit. Track what you spend your money on so you only spend on what you love — spending just $5.50 less a day adds up to more than $2,000 a year!

Don't be seduced by sales for stuff you don't need.

3. Pay it off. Interest fees are a thing of the past when savvy spenders discipline themselves to use their loyalty credit cards for everyday shopping, earning rewards, then paying off the balance.

4. Use the power of the 24 hour rule. Take the 'impulse' out of buying.

5. Don't spread the wealth too thin. Savvy spenders shed the wallet pounds by picking one value-added credit card — whether a loyalty reward credit card or cash back card — and sticking with it, maximizing every penny.

6. Online banking. Saves

you time, money and is better for the environment.

7. Work the 'buy now pay later' deals. Get the credit advantage without the interest charges — make monthly payments before the due date to avoid high interest rates.

8. Make shopping lists. Before going to the grocery store, make a list of items you need and don't forget to look for extra deals on the items you purchase.

9. Become a master comparison shopper. Do some research and decide what the best deals are on everyday items.

10. Fine dining, at home. Anyone can have a romantic lobster dinner for less than $30 by taking advantage of seasonal foods and bringing fine dining home.

Barnes, Glover tied at U.S. Open; Weir 6 back

Americans Ricky Barnes and Lucas Glover held a share of the lead after one hole in the U.S. Open final round yesterday as the weather-delayed tournament spilled over into a fifth day.

PGA Tour rookie Barnes, surprise pacesetter after the second and third rounds at Bethpage Black, bogeyed the par-four first after driving into the left rough to join playing partner Glover at 7 under, five ahead of the chasing pack.

The duo then teed off at the par-four second, Barnes again ending up in the left rough while Glover found the fairway, before the siren sounded to end play for the day in fading light.

Although they had the option to complete the hole, the co-leaders decided to leave the course and will return for the resumption of the final round at 9 a.m.

"I feel like if I can get a hot round going, I can make up the difference."

Phil Mickelson

local time today.

Former world No. 1 David Duval, making a popular return to form after eight years in the golfing wilderness, was among their closest challengers, bogeying the first to lie 2 under overall after two holes.

Level with Duval in a four-way tie for second were fellow Americans Hunter Mahan and three-times major winner Phil Mickelson, plus Britain's Ross Fisher.

Mahan and Bethpage crowd favourite Mickelson had 16 holes to play while Fisher was yet to complete the second.

"I feel like if I can get a hot round going, I can make up the difference," left-hander Mickelson said of his bid for a first U.S. Open title.

Mike Weir of Bright's Grove, Ont., was at 1 under after going 1 over through the first three holes of his final round.

Triple champion and holder Tiger Woods, who won the 2002 U.S. Open at Bethpage, was seven shots off the pace, having knocked in a six-foot birdie putt at the par-four seventh shortly after play was suspended for the day.

Players were sent out in pairs from the first and 10th tees for the final round, which organizers hope to wrap up by around 2 p.m. local time.

Sewing pattern into a career

OddJobs

Diane Peters

Metronews.ca/oddjobs

Laurie Swim has been quilting since she was 16 years old.

Nova Scotia-born Laurie Swim started sewing at around age 10. Her mom bought a machine and the young girl quickly took it over.

She started out with clothing. She once made a reversible ski jacket. Her grandmother did not believe it was her own creation.

At age 16, she made her first quilt.

"It just spoke to me. The colours, the texture," says Swim.

She studied art at Mount Allison University and the Nova Scotia College of Art and Design. After graduation, she apprenticed with two weavers in Denmark.

Overseas, she began to miss quilting, and when she came back to Canada had a woman who lived near her family home in Lockeport help her create up into thousands of thumbnail size pieces, and sew.

Now 60, Swim has numerous community art projects, gallery shows and three books on her resumé. She and her husband recently moved back to Nova Scotia, where Swim has been inspired by local history and the Maritime landscape.

She spends her mornings on her computer, answering emails. She goes to her storefront studio in Lunenburg — which is not far from her home — around 11. There, she draws ideas for new quilts and uses an overhead projector to create patterns on large pieces of paper. When she quilts, she uses a professional-grade sewing machine that allows her to do free-motion sewing.

She brings home hand sewing to do in the evening. And, day or night, she's always got her digital camera on hand to snap pictures of the landscape around her for images and inspiration.

Diane Peters once hawked magic pens at the Canadian National Exhibition. She's now a writer and part-time journalism instructor.

With a high school average in the high 90's, Erin Delamont could have attended any university. She chose Mount Royal for its undergraduate degree in Nonprofit Studies, the only one in Canada.

There, she met Naheed Nenshi, a Harvard grad and Canada's first tenured faculty member in nonprofit management. He taught Erin on her first day, and is still her advisor. Proud of her successes, on campus and in the community, Naheed is also proud to work at a place that puts students' futures, first.

The Bissett School of Business at Mount Royal.

Workology in brief

FIRST NATIONS FUNDING The federal government is withholding $2.4 million in funding from the First Nations University of Canada — which has campuses in Saskatoon, Regina and Prince Albert — until the beleaguered institution implements major changes. Indian and Northern Affairs Canada have requested university officials to meet a number of deadlines over the next few months.

EXCELLENT UNIVERSITIES Seven Canadian universities have picked up medals in the 2009 CASE Circle of Excellence Awards, an international program that recognizes outstanding institutional achievement in areas such as fundraising, marketing and alumni relations. Among the winners: Memorial University, which earned a grand gold and a bronze medal and the University of Toronto, which picked up two silver medals.

Nickelback are tops

MuchMusic Video Awards welcome the glitterati to T.O.

BRIAN COULTON
for Metro Canada

The top nominated band was also the most victorious at last night's MuchMusic Video Awards, with Nickelback taking home three out of the five awards it was up for.

The Vancouver-based band triumphed in the categories Video of the Year, MuchLOUD Rock Video of the Year and Post Production of the Year for the music video version of single Gotta Be Somebody from the band's 2008 release, Dark Horse.

The MMVAs, which annually shuts down the streets surrounding MuchMusic's Toronto headquarters at Queen and John streets, didn't stray from tradition, as fans thronged the area around the outdoor red carpet, hoping to see the host of musicians and celebrities in attendance.

Their enthusiasm for the event was evident when co-hosts the Jonas Brothers took the stage to perform at the top of the show. A gaggle of audience members met the New Jersey pop act with screams, setting an energetic tone for the show.

Gossip blogger Perez Hilton also drew cheers when, on the red carpet, he bypassed the security fence to meet his fans and sign autographs. Professing his appreciation of the city and country, Hilton said, "I love that Toronto feels like a real city ... Canada, like Lady Gaga, embraced us before any-

New York electronic dance artist Lady Gaga was an early winner of the night, taking home the International Video of the Year — Artist award for her single Poker Face, thanking her fans,

"God, and the gays," before performing later in the night.

Other victorious artists included Toronto-based R&B newcomer Danny Fernandes, who picked up the Pop Video of the Year honour, Toronto alternative rock band Billy Talent who, with their fathers accompanying them, received the International Video of the Year by a Canadian award.

took home the MuchVibe Hip Hop Video of the Year award, a victory for the artist who said he considers the music he makes a lot different than the mainstream.

"The hip hop that I grew up on was real music, talking about where you're coming from, what you're going through and trying to come up with something original. I feel like I should have been in the 90s making hip hop," he said with a laugh, "but we're trying to bring it back now."

Michael Bay, right, gives direction on the set of the upcoming film Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen.

Transformers director films sequel in Egypt

NED EHRBAR
for Metro Canada

Michael Bay is adamant about one thing: There's nothing he hates more in the movie business than waste.

"Hollywood is so rife with waste," he says, sneering. As an example, he cites directors who building "elaborate, million-dollar sets" then decide not to shoot on them. "That would never happen on one of my shows."

Instead of building million-dollar sets, Bay got to take the $200 million US production of Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen to Egypt to film on the pyramids, something most filmmakers can only dream of.

And it was all thanks to Zahi Hawass, the Secretary General of the Egyptian Supreme Council of Antiquities. "Dr. Hawass was a big fan of Transformers. That's why he let us shoot there."

Bay's "it's got to be loud" philosophy has led to bombastic hits like The Rock, Bad Boys and Armageddon. But it's also led to lemons like The Island and Pearl Harbor. Naturally, he doesn't think his latest giant robot opus will fall into the latter category.

Strapping in for the roller-coaster this time around — along with returning stars Shia LaBeouf and Megan Fox — is Ramon Rodriguez, a young actor with a season of The Wire and this summer's The Taking of Pelham 1 2 3 under his belt.

Bay sees Ramon's role as an extension of the audience. "He's never seen any of these things. So that adds for comedy," Bay explains. "And Ramon's quite funny."

"I end up getting sucked up into this world of robots and my world is completely flipped," adds Rodriguez.

For Rodriguez, working for the notorious taskmaster was more than a little intimidating, but he found his feet quickly thanks to a particularly exhausting audition.

"For an hour and a half, he had me running jumping and diving all around his furniture, acting like I was running from robots. And I left the room completely sweaty and drenched."

• Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen opens in theatres this Wednesday.

Miley tour bites scalpers back

TICKETS As Miley Cyrus prepares to hit the road this fall, the spotlight is shining on what was once a relatively minor piece of the touring puzzle: The ticket.

Or in this case, the lack thereof. Cyrus' tour will use paperless tickets, and that's causing a commotion, mostly among the scalpers who infamously made so much money from her last tour.

The 2007-08 Hannah Montana/Miley Cyrus Best of Both Worlds trek grossed $55 million US and sold about one million tickets to 70 shows reported to Billboard Boxscore. But it also provided outraged parents with a bitter introduction to secondary vendors, who scooped up tickets and sold them at huge markups. The resulting controversy made Cyrus the poster child for what many perceived as an out-of-control resale market.

Now Cyrus' fall tour will make history as the first arena-level trek to embrace paperless ticketing in an attempt to thwart resellers. As is the case with airlines, those who purchase the tickets must be on hand with their credit card to gain admission.

"The focus was, 'How do we take all the information we gathered last time out and do a better job of it?'" says Jason Morey, Cyrus' manager and president of Morey Management, an affiliate of Ticketmaster Entertainment's Front Line Management. "It was important to us to address the issue of demand. We thought that of every single option that was available out there, this was a really viable option, to go with the paperless ticketing."

Those associated with the tour say public feedback has been generally favourable and that tickets are selling well, with nearly 500,000 purchased already. The fact that they're not blowing out immediately as they did on the last tour is evidence that brokers aren't flooding the system, they say.

Meanwhile, secondary market players are crying foul, protesting that they're being shut out from buying Cyrus tickets, or at least hindered, and predicting entrance chaos, at concerts. Morey disagrees. "Scalping is a really important issue to Miley," he says, "but really the focus is about giving the regular fan an opportunity to buy a really good ticket at face value."

A darker tale of two cities

The City & the City

Author: China Miéville
Publisher: Ballantine Books
Price: $30 (Hardcover)

In a dark, distant future, Inspector Tyador Borlú is investigating a woman's murder in the European city of Beszel. But when he senses the case is related to greater, more lethal schemes, Inspector

BookPicks

Borlú decides to take his case international. But "international" to the residents of Beszel actually means travelling to the city UQoma, which inhabits the exact same physical geography as Beszel, separated by space and time. When Borlú ventures out of his city, he's faced with more than just a crime to solve, but the highly divisive attitudes of each city's dwellers and their motivations to overtake their rival metropolis.

Map of the Invisible World

Author: Tash Aw
Publisher: McClelland & Stewart
Price: $32.99 (Hardcover)

In 1960s Indonesia, brothers Adam and Johan are struggling with their paths, but in different places. Abandoned by their mother as children, Johan ended up in Malaysia, enjoying the luxuries of his wealthy adopters. But he can't shake leaving his brother behind, leading him to a destructive lifestyle. Meanwhile Adam, 16, is abandoned once more as Karl, the Dutch man who raised him, is imprisoned in an effort to rid the country of colonial remnants. On his quest to reconnect with Karl, Adam must face danger in Jakarta, with just a few photos and letters as his guide.

My Father's Tears

Author: John Updike
Publisher: Knopf
Price: $32 (Hardcover)

My Father's Tears is a posthumous collection of short stories by Pulitzer Prize-winning author John Updike, and his first anthology of this kind since 2000. Stories range in time from the 1920s to post-9/11, and explore a variety of international locations, classes and life stages. In the title story, Updike's narrator recalls his father crying when he left home to attend Harvard, considering how his son would now only grow farther from him. In Varieties of Religious Experience, Updike observes 9/11 from four points of view — a lawyer losing faith, an anti-American Muslim, a World Trade Center office worker and an on-flight passenger.

Jacko pleads legal ignorance

IN SELF-DEFENCE Michael Jackson is asking a judge to throw out the lawsuit his former publicist filed against him, on the grounds he was never served with legal papers, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Raymonte Bain, the singer's longtime rep, is seeking $44 million US in unpaid earnings from him. She was handed a default judgment in the case after Jackson failed to respond to the complaint — but he's pleading ignorance.

In a new declaration obtained by TMZ.com, Jackson claims he had no idea Bain was trying to sue him.

Bain's papers reveal how she tried in vain to serve Jackson with the papers, but could not breach the tight ring of security that surrounds the King of Pop. Bain reveals in the lawsuit all about her former boss' "impulsive and irresponsible" habits.

She claimed, "The magnitude of his spending is legendary as he has earned and dissipated several fortunes."

tern has been to spend to the brink of insolvency and then borrow against his assets to further feed his spending would give any other individual a moment of pause.

"Mr. Jackson exhibited and continues to exhibit impulsive and irresponsible spending habits without regard to his financial limits of his earnings."

Metro Recipe of the Day

Turkey Saltimbocca brochettes

INGREDIENTS:

1 1/4 cups (300 ml) long-grain rice
Salt and black pepper
1 lb (450 g) sliced turkey breast
2 tbsp (25 ml) red pesto sauce
4 slices Parma ham
12 large fresh sage leaves
Canola oil for greasing
8 cherry tomatoes
2 lemons

METHOD:

1. Preheat grill to high and put kettle of water on to boil.
2. Put rice into pot and add salt and 2 1/2 cups (625 ml) boiling water. Stir to separate grains, cover and simmer 10 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand, covered, 5 minutes.
3. Meanwhile, rinse and dry sage leaves. Place turkey slices between two sheets of plastic wrap and pound with rolling pin until about 1/2 in. (1 cm) thick. Spread pesto over one side of each turkey slice, cover with slice of ham, and lay sage leaf on top, then season with pepper.

4. Roll up each piece of turkey and ham from long side. With very sharp knife, cut rolls into pieces about 1 in. (2.5 cm) long.
5. Holding each piece firmly to prevent unrolling, divide rolls among 4 skewers, carefully inserting skewers through sides.
6. Lightly oil baking tray, lay brochettes on top and broil 5–6 minutes per side, or until rolls are golden and turkey juices are no longer pink.
7. Rinse and halve cherry tomatoes and add to rice. Wash wax from lemons. Finely grate rind of one lemon over rice and mix thoroughly. Cut other lemon into wedges and set aside.
8. Spoon rice onto warmed plates, place skewers on top and pour over any pan juices. Serve garnished with lemon wedges.

GREECE A MASTERPIECE YOU CAN AFFORD

Underwater Cave. Aegean Sea.

5000 years of worshipping the seas was all that was needed to venerate Poseidon, God of the Seas and to uncover the secrets of the sea depths. From the ancient art of sponge diving and the exploration of coral reefs to today's fully-equipped diving teams... the Greek sea depths have always offered a rich mosaic of underwater mountain ranges, caves and mysterious ship wrecks.
